Marder Named Sr. Tax Controversy Manager of Local CPA Firm and Reaches 25-Year Milestone

Amy Marder of East Brunswick has been promoted to Senior Tax Controversy Manager at the Dayton-based firm of E. Martin Davidoff & Associates, CPAs, and is celebrating her twenty-fifth year affiliated with the firm.

Primarily responsible for managing the Tax Controversy Department, Marder also handles the formation and dissolution of companies, including the intricate process of registration with taxing authorities. She is in direct communication with tax controversy clients, as well as the federal and state personnel who are assigned to their cases. Marder meets with clients to gather, prepare and review all documentation required for audits and meetings with the IRS and state taxing authorities such as the New Jersey Division of Taxation or the New Jersey Department of Labor. Additionally, she maintains the trust account for Davidoff's law firm.

Marder has "set the standard for the firm in terms of client service and providing a friendly, professional environment for both clients and employees alike," said firm owner/founder E. Martin Davidoff. "Truly, she is the soul of our enthusiasm about what we do and how we deal with people. She is extremely knowledgeable about the tax controversy environment and has developed positive working relationships with representatives at state and federal taxing agencies," he added. "We all rely heavily on her meticulous attention to detail which ensures that nothing ever slips through the cracks on any case."

When asked about remaining at one job in a time when employee loyalty has fallen by the wayside, Marder commented, "Working with someone like Marty Davidoff is a fantastic experience. He is a brilliant man and I have learned so much from him over the past 25 years. I attained knowledge that, in my opinion, could not be gained elsewhere."

Established in 1981, E.
